

38.02.03 OPERATIONAL ACTIVITIES IN LOGISTICS

A logistician is a specialist who organizes transport flows. He coordinates the delivery of goods from production to points of sale.

Logistician's job functions:

- The logistician thinks through the methods and routes of transportation from packaging and loading in the warehouse to delivery to the customer.
- Organizes special transportation for hazardous or perishable goods.
- Creates the most advantageous transportation scheme and provides several other options if something does not go according to plan.

A logistician is a wonderful administrator, he must always know where the cargo is at any given moment. Experience and personal qualities are of decisive importance in his work. Basically, he acts according to instructions, but in case of a violation of the work process, the logistician must quickly find a way out of the situation.

Logistician's responsibilities:

- Organize and improve the delivery system
- Reduce all possible costs for cargo delivery
- Build routes for delivery, loading and unloading of goods, transportation of passengers
- Manage the process and control forwarders, drivers, loaders
- Track the delivery of goods and transportation of people using GLONASS
- Maintain employee timesheets, prepare reports, and prepare transport documentation
- Communicate with suppliers, customers and employees.

Advantages of the specialty

Demand in the labor market

There is no tough competition

High level of wages

Mastering skills in working with modern digital platforms during the training period

The need for logisticians is present in all sectors of the economy.

Number of contractual full-time places - 32

Duration of study: 2 years 10 months.